Odom Reminding Horse Owners to Vaccinate Their Horses

Following more than eight reports of Eastern equine encephalitis (EEE) recently, Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Bob Odom is reminding horse owners to vaccinate their horses.

Odom said EEE has been identified as the cause of death in eight horses and suspected in two others in Lafourche Parish.

"Since there is no cure for Eastern equine encephalitis, I am urging horse owners to vaccinate their animals," Odom said. "This is a very preventable disease, but often horse owners wait until it's too late.

"Only rarely do horses recover from Eastern equine encephalitis," Odom said. "Even when an animal doesn't die, it is almost always brain damaged and is never usable again."

Odom stressed the significance of reporting and testing suspected horses.

"This is a public health concern and we are asking all horse owners to make sure their animals have up-to-date vaccinations and to consult a veterinarian if their horses are displaying any symptoms.

"It's crucial because that information is passed quickly on to other health officials," he said. "With the public health concern over Eastern equine encephalitis and other mosquito-borne illnesses, our animal health officials are an important link to the state and nationwide reporting systems."

Dr. Henry Moreau, state veterinarian, said Eastern equine encephalitis has a mortality rate of 90 percent. The disease causes encephalitis, or swelling of the brain, in both horses and humans, but cannot be transmitted directly from horses or humans to other horses and humans. The virus is transmitted by mosquitoes in two ways, either from bird to bird or from bird to mammal.

Infected horses become depressed and uncoordinated, develop a sleepy appearance, walk in circles and eventually collapse to the ground.

Horses that have not been vaccinated should have two doses administered about two weeks apart. Once the initial vaccination has been given, an annual booster is sufficient to maintain immunity.

Owners with horses displaying any of these symptoms should contact their local veterinarian. Any suspected equine neuro encephalitis case should be reported even if blood is not pulled. Eastern equine encephalitis, West Nile virus, Western equine encephalitis and Venezuelan equine encephalitis are all reportable on suspicion, not diagnosis, of disease symptoms.

Bob Odom,
Commissioner

wrong impression."

Geisler has done minimal advertising to fill up the summer camp. He schedules five sessions on alternate weeks allowing for property maintenance and to avoid counselor burnout.

Campers have come mostly from the Lake Pontchartrain parishes but this year he had two Russian children who now call Long Island, N.Y., home.

Thirteen-year-old Nicolai Brower learned about the camp from his cousin who lives in Tangipahoa Parish.

Russian-born Nicolai was unfamiliar with firearms. "I never shot a gun but I found it's fun to shoot guns," young Brower said. "I shot two pistols and shot four different guns."

Nicolai said he was planning on returning next year to take the advanced class.

Covey Rise also introduces campers to the basics of bow hunting.

Eleven-year-old Brendan Besh of Slidell already had some prior knowledge about the bow and arrow.

"My dad is pretty good with his compound bow,"

Besh said. "I knew a little bit about bows but I haven't shot my own compound bow yet."

"I've been hunting but haven't been bow hunting yet. It's one of my goals."

But all work and no play is not the rule of thumb at Covey Rise. There's a swimming pool and shallow creek for water play and a fully stocked pond for fishing.

Besh said the most fun he had at the camp were the marathon Hide and Go Seek and Capture the Flag games played under the cover of darkness.

Geisler is very happy the camp is working and he's dedicated to maintaining Louisiana's reputation as the Sportsman's Paradise.

"I think either the parents or grandparents hunts and wants to cultivate the interest in their children," Geisler said. "So many parents now don't have the place or maybe the knowledge but they want their kids to get the right foundation for safety. We teach that."
